The Berkeley Connect program has a seven-year track record of proven success supporting the university’s core missions of teaching and research. Berkeley Connect helps students succeed academically and improves their undergraduate experience—and it supports graduate students. As the program matures, the body of data documenting its impact continues to grow. We now know that Berkeley Connect has a positive effect on the academic success of under-represented, first-generation, and transfer students. We know that Berkeley Connect fellowships allow advanced graduate students to make substantial progress towards degree completion, while also benefiting from faculty mentoring and professional development activities. Berkeley Connect fosters a sense of belonging and the confidence needed for academic/professional success. These values are essential to maintaining our diversity and to meeting our commitments to excellence in undergraduate teaching and graduate student research.

“The Berkeley Connect Effect”: New Data
The data show that participation in Berkeley Connect improves academic performance.

Transfer students: Over 40% of Berkeley Connect participants are transfer students. An analysis by Equity & Inclusion compared all transfer students who participated in Berkeley Connect (or the Chernin Program pilot) between 2010 and 2015 with the entire transfer population for the same period. Significantly fewer Berkeley Connect participants have a first-term GPA below 3.0, and more Berkeley Connect participants have a GPA of 3.5 or higher:

<tr>

<tbody>
<tr>

<td>22%</td>
<td>16% (-6%)</td>

<td>33% (+1%)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>GPA 3.5 to 4.0</td>
<td>40%</td>
<td>46% (+6%)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Under-represented students: The percentage of URM students in Berkeley Connect (both transfer and non-transfer) is consistently higher than the percentage in the total undergraduate population. URM first-year students who participated in Berkeley Connect, compared to all URM first-years, demonstrate higher academic success across the board:

<td>96% (+7%)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4-Year Graduation Rate</td>
<td>56%</td>
<td>60% (+4%)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
These results are even more remarkable given that a higher percentage of URM Berkeley Connect participants, compared to all URM students, are first-generation college students (+3%), from the lowest ranked high schools (+4%), and from the lowest parental income bracket (+2%).

Major gifts are needed to ensure the stability and growth of Berkeley Connect. While it can be challenging to raise funds for a relatively new program that is not familiar to alums, we find that once alums learn more about Berkeley Connect, almost all of them respond: “I wish there was something like that when I was at Cal!” We look forward to building on this receptivity, and the tremendous success of the program, in order to make Berkeley Connect a permanent hallmark of undergraduate education at Berkeley.
